A place to float anyone's boat

There are overwater suites and beachside villas, but nothing gets clients as close to the water as a floating hotel. Clare Voight finds out about some of the best floating retreats

Canada's floating King Pacific Lodge is set in the Great Bear Rainforest and functions as a base for fishing trips

KING PACIFIC LODGE

CANADA

This hotel floats on the calm waters of the west coast's Barnard Harbour, in the pristine Great Bear Rainforest. Thanks to this prime spot, guests can enjoy a soak in the bath while looking out on to breathtaking wilderness or ocean views. The lodge has a Japan-inspired spa and fireside library to add to the five-star-luxury feeling. It also provides a base for fishing trips, hiking and kayaking. Its high-powered telescope for star-gazing and wildlife viewing mean you might spot a rare Kermode bear, whale, wolf, bald eagle or white-tailed deer nearby. Three nights (minimum stay) start at £3,022 per person, excluding tax. It is featured by operators including ITC Classics.

SALT & SILL

SWEDEN

Wake up to the sound of lapping waves at Salt & Sill, which is built on a moored pontoon off the west coast of Sweden and a one-hour drive from Gothenburg. Its minimal Scandinavian style, wooden features, granite flooring, and sea-view rooms offer spectacular sunset views. The hotel is also known for its sister restaurant, found on dry land next door, which serves fresh seafood and traditional local dishes (don't miss the herring platter). Recommend the suite with a roof terrace Jacuzzi, or tempt clients with the hotel's sauna boat, said to be the fastest floating sauna in the world, which stops at picturesque spots along the coast. Standard double rooms start at around £185 per night.

UAKARI FLOATING LODGE

The accommodation might be simple, but each room has a private terrace and bathroom with hot water. Deep in the heart of the Amazon's Mamiraua Reserve, guests will have the chance to see pink river dolphins, toucans, caimans and red-faced Uakari monkeys nearby. In the wet season (December to May), the surrounding forest area floods, so canoe excursion routes allow you to paddle between the treetops. The lodge also hosts working scientists, so guests can catch some fascinating talks about the local flora and fauna. Audley Travel suggests a seven-night package, including flights, with four nights at Uakari Floating Lodge and one night in Manaus from £1,750 per person.

Elephant Hills is a luxury camp in a Thai national park - this year 10 floating tents were added to the camp's accommodation portfolio

ELEPHANT HILLS

THAILAND

Elephant Hills is a well-established luxury camp in Khao Sok national park in southern Thailand. The original camp has 30 tents set in the jungle, and earlier this year 10 floating tents were added at nearby Cheow Lan Lake, complete with crisp, white sheets, en-suite bathrooms and wooden, safari-style furniture. Activities on offer include jungle trekking, elephant feeding, night safaris and canoe jaunts (each tent has its own canoe moored outside). Guests can also enjoy alfresco dining on balmy evenings by sitting out on the floating decking of the restaurant and bar, which is surrounded by the sounds of the jungle's wildlife.

The floating camp is featured by Premier Holidays, which can arrange a two-day Jungle Lake Safari extension to a Thailand itinerary from £190 per person.
